Children's/YA Librarian Report (Audrey Snowden):

Participation fell off sharply when we stopped doing outdoor programming, and virtual numbers for storytime did not pick up the slack. Yoga is still getting some participation, but otherwise, we are mostly getting interaction through take-home activities and our weekly gaming. Next week we will start a D&D campaign via Zoom, in an effort to explore more virtual gaming, and we'll see how that goes.

Children's/YA Librarian, Audrey Snowden, visited the middle school for our monthly book dropoff and checkout period. The week before the visit, she sets aside anything the school librarian has requested from our order lists, and she comes over to do some shelf shopping. Then Audrey takes the cart of selections and checks them out to the middle school. When she delivers the books, she set them up on prominent display, and they stay up on display for kids to check out. The books stay on display for about a week and then the librarians return whatever remains back to us. We started doing this in October, kicking it off with a middle school library card campaign, and we're planning to expand to the high school in the spring.

Building and Grounds

Four ceiling hung light fixtures were replaced, including one fixture for which we could no longer obtain a light bulb. Additional lights were added to the Young Adult area. DPW assembled our large worktable, located in the Young Adult area.

DPW will redo many of the plantings around the library, beginning with removing several trees and other plantings.

Other

The lower level was open 17 nights in December, used by 28 individuals and four meetings. I submitted proposed budget figures for FY23, which begins July 1, 2022.
